

Social Security Administration

Notice of Disability Decision

Date: March 18, 2024

Claimant: Maria Lopez

Claim Type: Disability Insurance Benefits

Condition Reviewed: Fibromyalgia

We have reviewed your claim for disability benefits. Based on the medical and other information currently in your file, we have determined that you are not disabled under our rules.

Why We Made This Decision

Your records show that you have been treated for fibromyalgia, including reports of widespread pain, fatigue, poor sleep, and difficulty concentrating. We considered these symptoms when reviewing your claim.

However, the evidence in your file does not show that your condition prevents you from doing all work activity on a regular and continuing basis. The records do not include a treating doctor statement explaining your limits with sitting, standing, walking, lifting, staying on task, or attending work on a consistent schedule.

We also did not receive complete follow-up treatment notes for the recent period referenced in your file. Without those records, we could not confirm the frequency and severity of your symptoms over time.

Evidence We Reviewed

- Application for disability benefits
- Adult Function Report
- Primary care treatment notes
- Rheumatology treatment note dated January 12, 2024
- Medication list submitted with your claim
- Work history information submitted with your claim

Social Security Administration

Notice of Disability Decision - Continued

What We Found

The medical evidence supports that you have a medically documented condition. The evidence does not currently show enough detail about how the condition limits your ability to function during a normal workday and workweek.

The file would need more information about:

- How long you can sit, stand, and walk during a normal day
- How much you can lift or carry
- Whether pain, fatigue, or medication side effects affect concentration
- How often symptoms would cause missed work or extra breaks
- Whether recent follow-up visits show ongoing severe symptoms

Your Right To Appeal

If you disagree with this decision, you may ask us to review your claim again. You must request an appeal within 60 days from the date you receive this notice. You may submit additional medical records, doctor statements, or other information that explains how your condition affects your ability to work.

If you have questions, contact your local Social Security office or a trusted representative before sending new information.

This notice is based on the information currently available in your file.